FATAL STAGE REALISM.

Mishaps In Carrying Out Directions That Have Ended In Death.

Such a piece of realism on the stage as that which occurred in a London theater lately, where one actor in a duel scene inflicted through a mishap a mortal wound upon one of his stage comrades, is by no means infrequent. Accidents, fatal and serious, humorous and tragic, constantly occur in stageland, and many an actor can show scars received in the mimic strife. The traditions of the stage are full of se rious and comic tragedies.

One such is said to have occurred at La Scala, Milan, in the presence of royalty itself. It was at the finale of a production of "Fra Diavelo," then the chief operatic sensation In the closing act the captured bandit chief is led up a rocky path on his way to prison. He turns to battle with his guards, when Lorenze orders his troops to fire, and Fra Diavole dies. On this particular night the picturesque bandit, who had always made a traditional fall, so that he would remain the central figure of the tableau on which the curtain descended, introduced what appeared to the audience some new business. He gave one short, despairing shriek and then fell forward from his elevation into the very midst of the chorus of soldiers and villagers. When the members of the company ran to pick up the singer, he was dead. A bullet had pierced his heart. In the confusion one of the soldiers, a beardless youth and a recent addition to the chorus, quietly passed out of the theater. He was pursued and arrested two days later. when the romantic discovery was made that the young soldier was in fact a girl who had been in love with the tenor. They had quarreled some time before, and, unknown to him, the girl joined the chorus of La Scala, loaded the property gun with a deadly bullet and thus introduced some startling realism on the Italian were compiled, it would be curious to note the large number of mis haps which happen in the performance of "Romeo and Juliet." More than one well known actor bears on his face and body the marks and scars inflicted by rapiers in the quarrel scene in the famous tragedy. A few years ago at a performance of "Romeo and Juliet" in the city of Manchester the ending of the play was tragic indeed. The actors were amateurs. All were greatly excited, and the two representatives of Mercutio and Tybalt fought with an unhappy realism. A purely accidental thrust by Mercutio caused Tybalt to fall to the floor, and before the audience understood what was the matter the unfortunate Tybalt had expired. Fortunately for the Mercutio of the performance, a coroner's jury returned a verdict of "death

by misadventure."

William Terriss once had a narrow escape from death in the repr sentation of this tragedy. "I had a little experience," he says, "in the run of 'Romeo and Juliet' when produced by Miss Mary Anderson which taught me to beware of stage weapons. I was once playing Romeo to the Juliet of the late Adelaide Neilson at the Haymarket, when I equipped myself with a dagger sharp as a razor. At one of the dress rehearsals Miss Neilson noticed this weapon and earnestly entreated me to substitute a blunted weapon for it. I did so and thanked her for her suggestion. During the Lyceum run of 'Romeo and Juliet' I forgot her wise counsel, and the result was that I fell on my own dagger, which was so sharp that it pierced me in the side. Since then I have taken the lesson to heart.' -New York Tribune.

Last summer one of our grandchilden was sick v tha severe bowel trouble Our doctor's: medies had failed, then we tried Chan erlaip's Colic, Cholera and diarrhoea Remedy, which gave very speedy relief. We regard it as the best medicine ever put on the market for bowel complaints.-Miss E. G. Gregory, Frederickstown, Mo. This certainly is the best medicine ever put on the market for dysentery, summer complaint, colic and cholera infantum in children. It never fails to give prompt relief when used in reasonable time and the plain printed directions are followed. Many mothers have expressed their sincere gratitude for the cure it has effected. Features-United Press Dispatches, Wash ngton and Richmond correspondence, daily narket reports, Local News, and matters of sterest to Virginia, but more especially to this city and section of Virginia. In its columns has always been found a mirror of passing events, and the careful chronicling of the history of what is going on in the world, but more especially in this section has ever been its aim. The GAZETTE situated as it is so close to Washington, the great centre of news, enjoys daily the benefi of the United Press Dispatches from every part of the world; hence its patrons can read from its columns in the evening what transpired that day in every portion of the United States as well as from every part of the habitable globe. Consequently it is an every-day occurrence for the GAZETTE to publish telegrams from the various European capitals about twelve or fifteen hours earlier than the morning papers.

GAZETTE. The Local Department furnishes a complete history of everything that occurs in and near the city, and this feature will, as ever, receive careful attention. Another feature that serves to make the
